Another Critical Condition of Affairs in Spain.

Topete's Resignation Accepted by the Regent.

M. ROCHEFORT'S RETURN TO FRANCE

The British Press on the Death of Mr. Peabody.

Confirmation of a Reported Indian Murder and Robbery.

SPAIN.

Acceptance of Topete's Resignation—The Monarchists and Progressists Seeking Union—The Vacant Throne—Rumors of Genoa.

MADRID, Nov. 5.—Admiral TOPETE has formally refused to withdraw his resignation, and it has been reluctantly accepted.

The Democrats and Progressists are holding a joint conference to discuss the situation and adopt a common course of action. The critical condition of affairs creates much public anxiety.

The opposition to the Duke of GENOA is thickening in favor and organizing a general movement, which is daily gaining strength, against his elevation to the throne.

MADRID, Nov. 4—Evening.—Señor CARRERA has been released from prison.

A battalion of volunteers sailed from Cadiz today, for Havana.

FRANCE.

The Imperial Court Hunting—An Electoral Meeting Broken up by the Police—Rumors of Rochefort in Paris.

PARIS, Nov. 5.—The Court went out hunting yesterday at Compiègne. The Emperor was not present.

One of the electoral meetings held last night was dissolved by the Police.

HENRI ROCHEFORT, the editor of the Lanterne, got out from Brussels yesterday on his return to Paris. On reaching the frontier he was arrested, but was subsequently released and furnished with a safe conduct by order of the Emperor. He then resumed his journey, and his arrival here is momentarily expected.

GEORGE PEABODY.

The English Press on the Death of the Philanthropist—His Character and His Name.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The death of the celebrated philanthropist, GEORGE PEABODY, has created a profound sensation. Nearly all the morning journals have obituary articles. That of the Times says:

"The news of Mr. PEABODY's death will be received with no common sorrow on both sides of the Atlantic. The sentiment of regret will not be a mere passing tribute of gratitude to a munificent benefactor. Mr. PEABODY, through a long life, accumulated manifold titles to be lamented. He was an ardent patriot, and loved abroad as much as at home. He was a New-Englander, who, when the South was bowed down to the dust, stepped forward and claimed the right to succor it. He was no courtier, yet he was honored by sovereigns and prized. He was profuse in his charity, which pauperized nobody. He was a philanthropist who was hated as well as honored. There was nothing hard or narrow about his philanthropy; he simply did whatever good came in his way."

The Post, in its obituary article, says: "Mr. PEABODY was one of the few whose private virtues are followed by public fame and whose virtues may be cited as examples. In laying the foundation of wholesome and cheerful homes for the working classes he acted upon a high sense of duty and touched the springs of civilization. He made his means the measure of his philanthropy. Throughout his whole life his conduct displayed a purity of character that could not fail to elevate and refine the feelings his generosity fostered."

The Telegraph says: "Mr. PEABODY's lot was doubly happy. The inscription on his mausoleum may tell with unquestioned truth of the man who lives in the hearts and earned the affection."

GREAT BRITAIN.

A Stubborn Class of the Southern—The Boat Race Between the Thames and Tyne Crews—Success of the Lasher.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The political news today is not important. To-morrow will be regarded as a holiday in London, and the Exchange will not be open for business.

Queen VICTORIA will visit the city to open a new bridge and viaduct.

The first of the great four-oared races between the Thames and the Tyne crews, for $200, was rowed to-day on the Thames. The course was from Putney to Mortlake. The following are the names of the crews:

TYNE.—J. TAYLOR, T. WISHEIR, J. MARTIN, J. HARRISON, (stroke,) WILSON, (coxswain.)

THAMES.—SADLER, KELLY, MESSENGER, HANNAMAN, (stroke,) R. HAMMERTON, (coxswain.)

The weather was rainy, but the race came off promptly, and was witnessed by a great crowd of people. The Tyne crew won by three lengths in twenty minutes and forty-three seconds. The Thames crew were the favorites at the start. The contest between these two crews will take place on the Tyne on the 19th inst.

A four-oared match, $200, has been arranged to take place on the Tyne, Nov. 17.

After the race on the Thames to-day SADLER, of the Thames crew, exasperated by his defeat, violently abused and struck WALTER BROWN, the Lasher coxswain. Friends interfered and prevented the quarrel from proceeding further.

Weather—The Proposed Ocean Race—Next Spring.

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The News thinks Fenian outrages business, and is ready to sell the Canadian stock March. ASHBURY may probably not be disappointed of an equinoctial gale. Once on New-York, if he fails to gain the Queen's cup, it will result from absence of competition. If the American yachtsmen do not find a clear field on the ocean in the Spring, they will be hard to suit.

AUSTRIA.

The Reichsrath Debate—The Austrian Ministry—Ban of Croatia.

VIENNA, Friday, Nov. 5.—Dispatches from Cattaro announce that the insurgents of Lisa and Verbiaje have surrendered. At last accounts the troops were on Pelesac.

CUBA.

An Expedition Against the Spaniards—Its Failure—Captain-General Dulce to Visit Cienfuegos.

HAVANA, Nov. 5.—An expedition, composed of troops and volunteers, recently left this city by sea and land to capture a strong body of insurgents (Garcia at head). All news has not been received, but it is reported that the Dario Sandoval has returned to port, the officers thinking that the enemy were apprised of its arrival days in advance, and that they have by this time withdrawn into the interior.

Captain-General DE RODAS has arrived at Santiago.

ITALY.

Rumored Illness of the King.

PARIS, Friday, Nov. 5.—It is rumored here that the King of Italy is sick. No official confirmation of the report has been received from Florence.

INDIAN MURDERS.

The Reported Killing of Colonel Stone Confirmed—The Savages Learning the Nature of Greenbacks.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 5.—The official report of the recent attack on the mail and the murder of Colonel STONE by the Indians at Apache Pass, Arizona, states that the attack was made after night, and was a complete surprise. The Indians were led by white men. The robbery of the mails was the principal object of the Indians, they having knowledge of greenbacks and facilities for disposing of them. After slaughtering the mail party, the Indians attacked a herd of cattle belonging to some Texas emigrants, stampeded 200 of the herd and killed one man of the party. They then twice attacked a Government train en route for Camp Bowie, but were repulsed. Troops from Camp Bowie have been sent in pursuit of the savages, who are making for Sonora.

Mike, the New-Hampshire Murderer—His Wishes Regarding the Execution.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 5.—PIKE, who is to be hanged here on Thursday for murder, makes a request which will probably be granted, that a quartet of young ladies in Concord who have often sung to him and other prisoners, be allowed to remain in his cell after he passes out for the last time, and sing while preparations to launch him into eternity are being concluded; that immediately after the cap is drawn over his face, while the straps and ropes are being adjusted. He also requests that no relatives of his victims shall be admitted to witness his death.

A Gale on Lake Ontario—A Schooner Wrecked—Accident to a Gunboat.

BUFFALO, Nov. 5.—A terrible gale, with rain and sleet, has been prevailing here since early this morning, and it is feared that much damage has been done on the Lake.

The bark Plymouth, from Hamilton, Canada, loaded with wood and staves, was wrecked on the breakwater this afternoon. Her crew were saved on a raft.

PORTLAND MONSON, Nov. 5.—The United States steamer Portsmouth, one of the convoys of the monitor Dictator, blew a hole in her boiler yesterday.

"Johnsonizing" the Tennessee Legislature—Washington Tactics.

NASHVILLE, Nov. 5.—Ex-President JOHNSON gave a banquet to the members of the Legislature at the Staley House to-night. Governor SENTER, Senator FOWLER and the members, and other distinguished citizens were present. It was one of the most agreeable entertainments ever given in Nashville, and everything passed off pleasantly. Mr. JOHNSON and the Anti-Johnson men mingled harmoniously.

Another Safe Robbery—$20,000 or $30,000 Stolen in Newburyport, Mass.

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—The safe of the Dorchester Insurance Company at Neponset was broken open last night by burglars, and a large amount of money taken. The safe was opened by drilling through it and then blowing it open with gunpowder. As near as can be estimated, the loss will amount to $20,000 or $30,000.

The property stolen consists of $14,620 in United States bonds, $7,000 in bank stocks, and 2,000 in bank bills. The loss falls upon the depositors.

Stores Burned in St. Louis—Tobacco Destroyed.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 5.—The grocery and liquor house of THOMAS D. LOW, and the commission house of THOMAS RHODES & Co., on Second-street, between Vine and Washington-avenue, were burned to-night. RHODES & Co. had about $10,000 worth of tobacco in their store, on which there was an insurance of $7,000 in the Mississippi Valley Company. The loss of Mr. Low is not known.

$30,000 Lost by Fire in Pulaski, Tenn.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 5.—The store of J. M. MCKENZIE, in Pulaski, was set on fire today by the explosion of a coal oil lamp. The house, together with the stock, was entirely consumed. BRAMAN's store, adjoining, was also burned, but his goods were saved. Another store was also much damaged. The loss was about $30,000, and is mostly covered by insurance.

Remains of Ex-Governor Wickliffe—The Tobacco Crop.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 5.—The remains of Ex-Governor WICKLIFFE were conveyed to their last resting place at Bardstown to-day. The Masonic fraternity, in great numbers, were in attendance.

It is estimated that one-fourth of the whole tobacco crop in Barren County, Ky., has been destroyed by the late frost.

Reconstruction in Texas—Ordinances of the Convention Revoked.

GALVESTON, TEXAS, Nov. 5.—The Provisional Governor has applied for authority to enforce the ordinances adopted by the Reconstruction Convention, but General REYNOLDS has decided that they are not valid, and says that the ratification of the Constitution will not in any manner or degree validate and make of force those ordinances.

Attempt to Poison a Valuable Trotting-Horse—Arrests on Suspicion.

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—THOMAS MCLAUGHLIN, FRANK MULVAY and JOHN FLANNAGAN have been arrested in Lawrence and put under $5,000 bail each, charged with attempting to poison the trotting horse Frenchman, owned by the Messrs. PEARCE, and valued at $4,000.

The McCoole-Allen Fight—Allen Held to Keep the Peace.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 5.—The McCoole-Allen legal difficulty is so far settled that the fight will come off. ALLEN was held in $2,000 bail to keep the peace by a Magistrate in Dalhi township.

Miscellaneous Telegrams.

FREMONT, Neb., Nov. 5.—This morning, at 10 o'clock, ground was broken on the Fremont and Elkhorn Valley Railroad. A large force of persons were on the ground, and immediately went to work. Ten miles of this road will be completed this year.

MEMPHIS, Nov. 5.—Messrs. DENT and ALCORN closed the canvass in Mississippi at Holly Springs yesterday. Judge DENT left for Washington on a brief visit.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 5.—T. T. SHREVE, one of the wealthiest men in the State, died here to-day.

HAVANA, Nov. 5.—A dispatch from Fort Jucaro, Havana, to General EATON, Chief of the Commissioner's Department, says that the Government corral at that port was struck by lightning on Wednesday, and sixty mules were killed. The building was partially burned.

Shipping in and Insurance Salvage Cases.

From the Middle Register, Oct. 31.

The greatest salvage case on record in our American Courts has of late been decided, and for the last two days witnesses have been busy showing the large expenses by them incurred among their numerous clients, most of whom are now dead to vouch before the successors of sailors and owners.

[illegible] Mr. Justice Hunt, in the United States Circuit Court, New-York, on Tuesday last, gave his decision in the case of the steamship Ocean Queen against the steamship Ocean Pearl, and the steamship Ocean Queen against the steamship Ocean Pearl and the steamship Ocean Queen against the steamship Ocean Pearl and the steamship Ocean Queen against the steamship Ocean Pearl

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE MYSTERY OF LIFE AND ITS ARTS. By JOHN RUSKIN. JOHN WILEY & SON.

While in Mr. RUSKIN's later productions there is always something that pains, there is likewise always something that teaches, and the old fascination of style is often there despite of the misanthrope and the dispeptic. The fantastic, which reminds us of the later work of that great painter, of whom Mr. RUSKIN has written so well, is a great interpreter. This last little volume is a lecture delivered before a society in Ireland. Its alternations of mirth and melancholy, while characteristic enough, are suggestive of a lack of intellectual balance which, for the many who admire and love Mr. RUSKIN, is distressing to see. He tells in it a story of disappointment, which has been the bag note of the symphony of his mature life. It is given in these few words:

"I spent the best and happiest years of my life (from twenty to thirty) in endeavoring to show the excellence of the work of the man, GURWHIT, whom I believed, and rightly believed, to be the greatest painter of the schools of England since REYNOLDS. I had then perfect faith in the power of every great truth or beauty to prevail ultimately and have its right place in usefulness and honor; and I devoted my life, the noblest work into this one place, while the painter was yet alive. But he knew, better than I, the uselessness of talking about what people could not see for themselves. He always discouraged me hopefully, even when he thought me and he died fully over the unpopularity of my work was visible. I went on, however, thinking I could at least be of use to the public, if not to him, in proving his power. My books got talked about a little. The prices of modern pictures generally rose, and I was beginning to take some pleasure in a sense of gradual victory, when, suddenly or unfortunately, an opportunity of perfect trial undeceived me at once and forever. The Trustees of the National Gallery commissioned me to arrange the Turner drawings there, and entrusted me to prepare three hundred examples of his studies from nature for exhibition at Kensington. At Kensington they were, and are, placed for exhibition; but they have not exhibited, for the room in which they hang is always empty."

This is very sad, but still one cannot but wonder that, close student as Mr. RUSKIN has been of the relation between art and popular appreciation, of the extraordinary disproportion that exists between people who know things and people who have to be told things, this experience so old and so often repeated, should have come upon him as a disheartening surprise. Distinction in art or in literature would be something other than it is, but not necessarily something better. If exact appreciation instantly followed achievement, and reward were symmetrically adjusted to desert. The subject is too large for brief handling, but the imperfect view he gives of it seems to take of it force as to the belief that his splendid powers are, in a few respects, or on one or two of his many sides, either stunted or deteriorated. We have given a specimen of his melancholy; let us close remembering he is addressing an Irish audience—with a specimen of his humorous:

"Sunstroke. I do not mean to say that in past or present relations between Ireland and England the fault has been wholly wrong and we right. Far from that; I believe that in all great questions of principle we have usually right and wrong, sometimes in misunderstanding you, sometimes in resistance injurious to you. Nevertheless, in all disputes between States, though the strongest is usually in the right, and the weaker is often wrong, it is a healthy sign when we continue amidst the possibility of our being in error and yet never do."

THE FRONT WORKS OF RALPH WALDO EMERSON. New and Revised Edition. FIELDS, OSGOOD & CO.

It is gratifying to see a new and handsome edition of the essays of a man who has done so much to give an individual or national character to American philosophy and literature. Mr. EMERSON is one of the few whose works men come to criticise while their writer is still alive. We may add that he is one of the few whose fame, great as it is, men do not seem to envy or to seek to depreciate. The general instinctive perception that he is one who loves his fellow-beings, who does not dislike or scoff at, or wish to trample on them, must account for this, since nothing else adequately can. It were impossible to desire for a noble writer in the evening of his days a greater glory or a greater happiness. The contrast afforded by it with the position of other brilliant essayists of perhaps equal genius but less heart, points its own moral. Neither analysis nor encomium of Mr. EMERSON's writings is at this time called for. It may be well, however, to say that in this edition there are marks of finish and amendment that show the careful hand of the master. The new generation of Americans should be careful to study and intimately know these essays. It is of that they should be thoroughly conscious of the extent in which the thought and literature of their country has been indebted to them. Mr. EMERSON's reputation is one that the gains or neglect of any particular generation is now unlikely to affect; but grateful appreciation is always wholesome, and our age needs all the moral aliment it can assimilate. We therefore hope that this new edition will be widely circulated; and that young or unfamiliar readers—and writers—will not fail to profit by it.

THE TWO BARONESSES. A Romance. By HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN, author of the "Improvisatore," &c. New-York: Published by HURD & HOUGHTON. Cambridge: Riverside Press. 1869.

HANS ANDERSEN has told some very good simple tales; but he has never written, and we venture to prophesy, never will write anything like a good novel. The present production, without containing anything positively silly, is about as poor a novel as we remember to have seen for a considerable time. With material which, in the hands of a real novelist—SCHEFFLER for instance—would have shaped itself into one of the most interesting and thoughtful of romances, ANDERSEN has succeeded in producing a mere childish story, without internal coherence, definite purpose or art-problem. It has no more significance as a work of art than the History of Jack the Giant Killer. The characters are puppets which the author moves, in the most arbitrary way, to suit his fancy. With the exception of the old Baroness and, perhaps, Mme. Krone, they do not seem to have any objective reality. Not one of them, not even the motherless Elizabeth, ever becomes real enough to excite any sympathy.

ANDERSEN's novel is a complete failure, and the fact need not surprise any one. A simple man, with a sobriquet that is almost puerile, ANDERSEN has never drunk deeply enough from the tide of modern life to be able to enter sympathetically into its tendencies. His mind is, if we may use the expression, idyllic. He loves the native, untutored innocence of the character that has never had to determine itself by mixing and battling with the world. Hence his tales, though pleasing and amusing, have nothing in them to demand the attention of serious and thoughtful persons.

It is a misfortune to be born or to live in a country which lies outside of the great current of modern progress; for countries that seclude themselves face no better than those that seclude themselves. A man whose horizon is bounded by Denmark is not likely to produce much that will be interesting to the great world, more particularly, if he is a man inclined to wind right from labor and live in the narrow world of his own fancy. A childlike man may be a very pleasant acquaintance or companion, but the world's artists and poets are made of sterner stuff.

THE WRITINGS OF MME. SWETCHINE. Edited by COMTE DE FALLOUX. Boston: HOUGHTON, 1869.

It is impossible to speak of Mme. SWETCHINE without reverence for her as a woman, and respect for her as a writer. Devoted to the best interests of mankind as well as the cultivation of her own inner spiritual life, she was the friend of LACORDAIRE and RAVIGNAN, the sympathetic confidant and counsellor of DE TOCQUEVILLE. She was an independent thinker and a clear headed moralist, who occupied herself with the great problems of civil and religious liberty, [illegible] with skill [illegible] upon them with accuracy. Her imagination was neither creative nor fertile; but her intellectual and moral powers were lucid and intelligent; her piety was genuine and her temper formed in the mould of Christian benevolence. The present volume appears under the auspices of the Comte DE FALLOUX, to whom we are already indebted for the Life and Letters of Mme. SWETCHINE. It contains fragments of her writings which were not intended for publication, but the knowledge they afford of a character no less distinguished for virtue than for saintly beauty, justifies the editor in rescuing them from oblivion. To the detached thoughts which were committed to writing by Mme. SWETCHINE during a long Winter, she gives the fanciful name of "Aiveline," from the fact that they, like the little flower, ripened under the snow. Of these the following are brief examples:

"Moral difficulties—the perplexity attendant on conflicting interests and duties, between which we cannot shoot and fain not decide, have often made me think that in the will of Providence to impose mysteries upon the conscience as well as the mind. On the one hand, we have the faith that submits blindly, on the other, the heart humiliated because it cannot take refuge in the certainty of having done right.

"The obscurities of faith always permit us to see a little way into the impossible. There are a certain which is never withdrawn, but which we are always trying."

The essay on "Old Age" contains some beautiful thoughts, expressed with piety and simplicity. No sighs are wasted upon the caprices of fortune or the neglect of merit. If there be a little of the self-complacency of age, there is none of its morosness and sadness. The interesting treatise on "Resignation" will command attention. The theories of the writer are propounded with ingenuity, and interwoven with pure and elevated maxims concerning the conduct of life. The translation is excellent.

HISTORY OF ENGLAND, FROM THE FALL OF WOLSEY TO THE DEATH OF ELIZABETH. By JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE, M.A., &c. CHARLES SCRIBNER & CO. Vols. I. and II.

It is always a pleasure to commend the enterprise of publishers who, through a low-priced yet worthy edition, place the standard works of the day well within popular reach. Whatever may be thought of the merits of the historians of our own immediate time as compared with those of their predecessors, it is undeniable that they have advanced theories, and struck out conceptions not only of great value in themselves, but strongly expressive of the spirit of their age. With such exponents the masses of the people, especially in a country like this, ought to be familiar. The appearance of the copies of such authors as BUCKLE, and even LECKY in public libraries, puts the state of the popular appetite in this regard beyond conjecture, and Mr. FROUDE's work, apart from its original merits, is enriched by many hitherto unpublished manuscripts, of which the Simancas Collection form but a small part, that greatly enhance its general interest. We think the present venture of Messrs. SCRIBNER & CO. an altogether safe one, for do not hold it for that reason to be less praiseworthy. The two volumes of Mr. FROUDE's history now before us are a monthly installment, to be repeated until the whole work is published. Sold at less than half the price of the library edition, the present one is in print, paper and form substantially good, and deserving what such recommendations will doubtless insure it, an extensive circulation.

LETTERS OF PEREGRINE PICKLE. By GEO. P. UPTON. Chicago: The Western News Co.

This is a collection of essays written in the first person. The originality which guided Mr. UPTON in his choice of a title serves him unfailingly throughout. It is very difficult to understand the considerations that lead people to write such volumes, or, having written, to publish them. As a specimen of this freakest product of the genius of Chicago, there is no injustice in citing from page 19 the following:

"To write about Something is an extraordinary feat; to write about Nothing is a feat not so easily performed.

I propose to write about Nothing, as I have Nothing to write.

Any one can be Something in the world. It requires genius to be Nothing.

There are very few people who have succeeded in being Nothing. In order to be Nothing it is necessary to know Nothing. In fact, it requires a great deal of knowledge to be Nothing. By assiduous effort for the past quarter of a century, more or less, I have thoroughly succeeded in being Nothing."

Ex uno disce omnes! A sufficiently careful examination of this author's work does not incline us to challenge in the smallest degree his final proposition.

JOHN PLOUGHMAN'S TALK, on Plain Advice for Plain People. By C. H. SPURGEON. New-York: SHELDON & CO.

This is a sensible, and will be a useful book if it can reach the class of people for whom it was made. It contains brief and homely talks to servants and laborers, and mechanics; added is written in strong, plain English, with a plentiful supply of proverbs and common phrases. A refined taste will shrink from many of the words, and justly call the style coarse; but it was written for those whose everyday language it was, and it carries the truth home in a pungent and lively style which will be sure to secure attention and fasten the point in the mind. The author's reputation will recommend the book to thousands who have read his sermons, and those who have not read and do not care to read discourses upon religious topics, will be interested with plain talk like this, "to the idle:"

"Every man ought to have patience and pity tempered; but for laziness I see little or no excuse. A little pinching would be healthy physic for all sluggards; but there is no chance of some of them getting their full dose of this medicine, for they were born with silver spoons in their mouths, and, like species, they will operate elsewhere in the same somewhat. Poor souls! They are, as the old proverb says, as lazy as Ludham's dog, that leaned his head against the wall to bark; and, like lazy sheep, it is too much trouble for them to carry their own wool."

Or this, to people who are unlucky:

"How aggravating it is when those who knocked you down kick you for not standing up! It is not very pleasant, to hear that you have been carried home; that there were fifty ways of keeping out of your difficulty, only you had not the sense to see them. You might not to have lost the game; even Tomfool can see when you made a bad move. We ought to have locked the stable door; everybody can see that now. Nobody offers to buy the horse after it has died; everybody wants to sell the nag! Yes, but that won't save the poor fellow from drowning. When a man's coat is threadbare, it is easy enough to pick a hole in it. Good advice is poor food to a hungry family. Lend me a bit of earth to tie up the fences, and put fresh with my old thatch, lest I get horse, I will be obliged to you. Put money in your purse, or else put it in for your feelings."

A PRACTICAL PHYSIOLOGY. By CHARLES KEAN, M.D., M.R.C.S. Handbook of New-York: MACLEAN & CO.

These essays are designed as a contribution to the "Natural History of those enlivening regions of Thought and Action, whose double is the 'debatable ground' of Brain, Nerve and Mind." They belong, therefore, to the class of articles with which our public has lately been made familiar through the pages of the Journal of Psychological Medicine. The book is divided under eight heads, which [illegible]

SHIPBUILDING ABROAD.

Sixth Letter—British Built Ocean Steamers—The History of the Different North American Lines—Success of Iron Screw Steamers—How the Fastest Ships were Crushed Out—Golden Opportunities for Americans.

From Our Special Correspondent.

LIVERPOOL, Thursday, Oct. 7, 1869.

The merchants of Liverpool, having long ago distanced the merchants of New-York in the establishment and successful working of ocean steam lines, are now rapidly running ahead of London, which, with its outport of Southampton, once had the lead in ocean steam navigation. Of the many steam lines which connect Liverpool with the principal ports of North and South America, Asia and Africa, the line only, the Cunard line, owes its origin to the subsidy system, which in the early days of long ocean steam voyages, was looked upon as an indispensable condition of success. The established lines to North America are the Cunard, Inman, National and Guion lines to New-York, and Allen's line to Quebec and Montreal.

THE CUNARD LINE.

The Cunard line was established in 1839-40, with a liberal subsidy from the British Government. Its founder, Mr., afterward Sir SAMUEL CUNARD, was a merchant at Halifax, and the object of the original Cunard contract was to provide improved postal facilities between Great Britain and her North American Colonies. The Canada mails were then forwarded via Halifax, and, so far as the British Government was concerned, the line was strictly a British Colonial enterprise. Mr. CUNARD, knowing that the passenger traffic of the United States would be of far more value than the passenger trade of the colonies, and that the two might be combined by continuing the voyages of his steamers to a port in the United States, arranged with the Government for an extension of the mail service to the United States, undertaking to perform the whole service for the compensation which had been agreed upon for the colonial service alone. After securing his postal contract, Mr. CUNARD entered into a partnership with Messrs. GEORGE & JAMES BURNS, of Glasgow, and Messrs. D. & C. MCIVER, of Liverpool, who were at that time large owners and efficient managers of steam lines from Glasgow to Liverpool, and from Glasgow to the North of Ireland. Four steamers of 1,200 tons and 440 horse power were built on the Clyde, under the experienced supervision of the Messrs. BURNS, and in the Summer of 1840 the Cunard line dispatched its first steamer from Liverpool to Halifax and Boston, and commenced a career which, up to this time, is without a parallel in the history of ocean navigation. In the twenty-nine years of its existence not one life has been lost by shipwreck or disaster at sea. It is not necessary for me to detail the improvements which have been made from time to time in the fleet of the Cunard Company, their fine steamers being as well known in New-York as they are in Liverpool.

THE INMAN COMPANY.

The Inman Company ranks next to the Cunard in the New-York trade, and it is entitled to the credit of having started without a subsidy, and having successfully worked its way into a position which is second only—if, indeed, it is second—to the Cunard line, by sheer good management, and against the opposition of the Cunard and Collins subsidized lines. It has outlived the Collins line, and raised itself to an equality with the Cunard line in the speed and regularity of its service. The Inman steamers have long carried the United States mails, to the entire satisfaction of the Post Office Department at Washington, and the British Post Office has at last been forced to acknowledge that its claims for mail compensation are fully equal to those of the Cunard Company. The Inman Company now receives £35,000 per annum for a weekly mail service to New-York, exclusive of its arrangement with the United States Post Office for the conveyance of mails from New-York to Queenstown and Liverpool. For the last-named service it receives a part of the ocean postage on the mail matter carried by its steamers.

OTHER LINES.

The next New-York line in point of seniority is the National Steamship Company, and the fourth is the Liverpool and Great Western Steam Company, conducted by Messrs. GUION & Co. here, and by Messrs. WILLIAMS & GUION in New-York. The last two companies make their profits upon freights and steerage passengers, and at the same time offer more spacious and comfortable cabins to their saloon passengers than the very fast ships can afford to give. Their steamers are much more profitable freighting vessels than the mail steamers of the Cunard and Inman Companies, and the introduction of such steamers as the France, Idaho, &c., &c., in the New-York and Liverpool trade marks an era in the history of Transatlantic steaming.

IRON SCREW STEAMERS.

When the Cunard and Collins lines were projected, it was believed that the traffic which would be carried on by steam across the Atlantic, would be limited to first-class passengers paying high fares, and to a very limited quantity of costly cargo, upon which a very high rate of freight could be paid. As this traffic would necessarily be limited in quantity, by the inability of the steamers of those days to carry more than a few hundred tons of cargo, the traffic receipts could not be expected to cover the heavy cost of working the expensive paddle steamers of the period. Government bounty, in the shape of a mail subsidy, was therefore an indispensable preliminary condition to the starting of a new Transatlantic steam line. The application of iron and the screw to the construction and propulsion of ocean steamers, was followed by a great reduction in the cost of working ocean steam lines, especially on routes where moderate speed would serve the trade requirements. Iron screw steamers were built for the American trade and started out to try their fortunes without a subsidy. The first that went from Liverpool to New-York was the South Sands, under the command of that skilful and popular shipmaster and genial and true gentleman, Captain WILLIAM C. THOMPSON, of New-York. The South Sands was doing very well in the New-York and Liverpool trade when the rush for California broke out, and she was withdrawn and sent to the Pacific. The establishment of the Glasgow and New-York screw line, and of the Richardson Brothers' new the Antwerp line, from Liverpool to Philadelphia, followed upon the experiment with the South Sands. It was soon found that the very ships could make money carrying a trade which the mail paddle ships—the sisterers of the ocean as that day—rejected. Cattle passengers were taken at reduced fares, and steerage passengers and others were carried at a profit at rates which the owners of the mail ships could not look at. Emigrants, and the better description of merchandise, were drawn away from the American packet ships and transferred to the new steamers. Before the season closed the only loss to the packet ships had been in passengers. The Inman line or [illegible] The Guion line [illegible] The Cunard line [illegible] The Inman line

[illegible] WILLIAMS and JEROME JOHNSON, both colored, quarrelled in Grand-street at an early hour yesterday, about tobacco, and JACKSON was stabbed in the neck by WILLIAMS. The wound was a severe one, and after it had been dressed at the Eighth Precinct Station House the injured man was conveyed to his home by his friends. WILLIAMS was committed to await the death of his injured.

While EDWARD LINDMAN, of No. 38 Cherry-street, was passing through Water-street, about 3 o'clock yesterday morning, he was suddenly assaulted without any provocation having been offered by an unknown man, who struck at him savagely with a knife, inflicting severe wounds on the neck and face. The assailant escaped and LINDMAN was conveyed to the Fourth Precinct Station House.

Progress of the Work in the New Post-Office.

Mr. MULLETT, Government Architect, on his recent brief visit to this City, expressed himself well satisfied with the progress of the work on the new Post Office. The Superintendent's report for October shows that during that month 20,450 cubic yards of dirt were removed, 1,355 cubic yards of concrete laid, and 6,466,900 pounds of wall built. There are now 500 men employed night and day. Yesterday the concrete foundation was completed the entire distance around. The stone for four of the cellar pillars has arrived from Maine, and three more ship loads are on their way here. These pillars come all ready to be set up.

Laborers are now hard at work carting away the dirt from the main part of the area for the basement.

Navy Yard Enlistments.

The Albany took her crew on board yesterday, numbering 300 men, and will leave for her post to-day, under command of Captain WATCH.

A draft of sixty sailors arrived at the Navy Yard at noon yesterday, from Philadelphia.

The United States slave ship Gorgel is ready for sea, and will go out of commission in a day or two.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

Hon. Stanley Matthews, of Ohio, and E. C. Camp, of Tennessee, were admitted to the bar.

Nos. 188 and 189.—The United States vs. Speed et al., and Same vs. Floyd.—Argument concluded.

No. 198.—The United States vs. George W. Lane.—Appeal from the Court of Claims.—Lane entered into gas contracts with the Treasury Agent at Norfolk, Va., for the delivery of 1,000 barrels of rosin, and also for 100 bales which cotton was on the Chowan River, in North Carolina, and within the lines held by the insurrectionary forces. The commander of the military forces of that place, in the name of the military power, and against the protest of the Treasury Agent, seized the rosin, and released the cotton. The Court of Claims held that the seizure was illegal, and that the returns made by the Treasury Agent were false and fraudulent. It also held that the plaintiff was not a traitor, and that the proceeds of the property should be paid to him. The Government contended that the property was captured in the military sense, and that the Court of Claims had no jurisdiction of the case, because it was a case of forfeiture, and that the Court of Claims had no jurisdiction of forfeitures. The Government also contended that the property was captured under the laws of war, and that the Court of Claims had no jurisdiction of such cases. The Government also contended that it will not excuse its agents, even through its officers, legislative, executive, or judicial, acting in the name of a corporate body, by one of the agents of the Government, authorizing it to make it. No implied contract arises from such a state of facts. But the agent whose act is sued for is not a party to the suit. The agent whose act is sued for is not a party to the suit. # NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

Madrid dispatches report that the opposition to the Duke of Genoa for the throne of Spain is daily gaining strength. The Democrats and Progressists had a meeting yesterday to discuss the situation, which is regarded as critical. The resignation of Admiral TOPETE has been reluctantly accepted. Señor ORENSE has been liberated, and a battalion of volunteers sailed from Cadiz yesterday for Havana.

Nearly all the London papers of yesterday contained obituary notices of the late GEORGE PEABODY. His death causes, it is said, a feeling of deep sorrow throughout England.

To-day is to be observed as a holiday in London, and the Queen is to visit the city for the purpose of opening a new bridge and viaduct.

The first of the four-oared boat races between the Thames and the Tyne crews for £200, was pulled on the Thames yesterday, in the midst of a heavy rain storm, and was won by the Tyne crew by three lengths. Time—20 minutes, 15 seconds. The course was from Putney to Mortlake. The second race is to be rowed on the 19th inst., on the Tyne.

An electoral meeting held at Paris on Thursday evening was broken up by the Police. It is rumored in Paris that VICTOR EMMANUEL is sick, but the report has not yet been confirmed from Florence.

The latest reports from the Dalmatian insurrection are to the effect that the insurgents of Lisca and Verbaia have surrendered, and that the Austrian troops are marching on Poboit.

CUBA.

Havana dispatches report the recent departure of a cooperating land and sea expedition from that city for the purpose of attacking a strong force of insurgents at Cienaga de Zapata. The result is not yet known. The Diario doubts its success from the fact that it believes that the enemy was apprised of the movement, and has withdrawn into the interior. The arrival of Captain-General DE RODAS at Cienfuegos is reported.

GENERAL.

The recent attack on the mail and murder of Colonel Sprague by the Indians at Apache Pass, Arizona, is officially reported to have been a complete surprise. The Indians were led by white men, and plunder was the object. After killing the party, 250 cattle belonging to Texas emigrants were stampeded and one man killed. A Government train, on its way to Fort Bowie, was also twice attacked. Troops are pursuing the Indians, who are making for Sonora.

Information received through the British Minister at Washington indicates that the British Government is disposed to reduce the single rate of postage for prepaid letters between the United States and the United Kingdom to three pence. A proposition similar to this was made last month by our Government, and it is now probable that the reduced rate will be established.

THOMAS N. BENNY, a prominent lawyer of Baltimore, committed suicide by shooting himself yesterday, at his residence in that city.

The third annual council of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of North America, began its session in Chicago, Ill., yesterday. Seventy-five delegates were present. The business of the day was confined to hearing the annual address and the report of the Executive Committee. Rev. G. F. SCHOENEWEG was chosen President.

A very severe gale swept over Buffalo yesterday, causing, it is feared, much damage on Lake Erie.

A murderess named FIRE, who is to be hanged at Concord, N. H., on Thursday next, has made the singular request that a committee of Female ladies of that city, who have personally attended "hobbing", and supporting the prohibitionists have never uttered their words. By one of these curious contrasts, we also see in philadelphia, the special advocates of so-called "temperance" have furnished the most "frightful examples" of intemperance in language and conduct.

The result has been thus far, as we have said, that many people have violently opposed the prohibition movement, who, had it taken another form, would have sufficed it to run its chances. It has secured the hatred of many who cannot submit to see all other interests mortified to this. That it should gradually have lost ground, even in Massachusetts, which would naturally give it something of a welcome and support, is not wonderful when the persistency of its assumptions is considered.

If the friends of the temperance cause have learned wisdom by experience, they will hereafter content themselves with less than they have been accustomed to demand. Instead of trying to force the question on parties formed for different purposes, and instead of trying to break up those parties by reason of their unwillingness to have that dogma introduced as an article of general party faith, they will seek simply to throw their influence in behalf of friends of temperance in local elections, choosing, as between any two candidates, the one whom they consider to be the best man.

The Removal of the Capital.

Nothing could indicate more clearly the existing scarcity of topics in the political world than the agitation going on in the West about the removal of the national capital from Washington to the centre of the continent. The arguments, too, are worth study, as specimens of the ingenious way in which men often manage to work themselves, in dull times into a state of excitement. The principal one is, of course, that the circumstances of the country have totally changed since Washington was fixed upon as the seat of Government, and that the centre of population as well as of wealth is no longer, or will very soon be no longer, on the sea-board but in the Mississippi Valley. But then it is not at all likely that either political influence or the greatest density of population will be found forever in any part of the Union in particular. The tides both of influence and population ebb often from one century to another in every country. The north of England was, as compared to the south, a howling wilderness, and Liverpool a fishing village, little over a century ago. Since then Lancashire has become the great centre of English industry, Liverpool almost the greatest port of the Kingdom; while the south-western counties, with their great port of Bristol, have sunk into insignificance. Scotland, too, from being a country of beggarly nobles and half-starved peasantry, has, within the same period, risen into the first rank both in manufactures and agriculture. On the European continent the changes have been no less remarkable. Genoa and Venice, once first-class emporia, have within two centuries sunk into total insignificance, and make a beggarly exhibit of vacant wharves, which once groaned under the merchandise of the whole eastern world. Trieste has, in the meantime, risen rapidly into a first-class position, and is absorbing more and more of the trade of the Mediterranean; and it is not impossible that a very few years may see Constantinople, owing to the extension of railways in the European provinces of Turkey, restored to the proud position as a commercial city which it once enjoyed, and for which its position clearly marks it out. We might multiply these illustrations to any extent. There is no quarter of the globe in which population, commerce, industry and wealth are not shifting constantly from one place to another. In our own country here as it is there, enough has occurred already to warn us of the folly of making plans for the remote future. Compare the relations of New-England to the rest of the country to-day, to what they were fifty years ago. Compare the relation of New-York to Boston or Philadelphia with what it was fifty years ago. Look at the present condition of New-London and Salem, and think of what it was within the memory of men still living. We all know what the present condition of the Southern States and their seaports is now; but who is the man so bold as to say what it will be after half a century of free labor? Who will venture to assert positively that with their soil and climate, and other natural advantages, those States will not before the close of another century have drawn the weight of population and of wealth away from the Northwestern States completely? And what human being can tell what influence the Pacific slope is going to exercise on the material fortunes of the Eastern States? In short, look in what direction we may, we find abundant proof of the folly of attempting to decide now where either the commercial or political headquarters of the United States ought to be, even if we concede that the capital ought to be wherever there are most voters, and even if it were important, as regards accessibility, where the capital should be in these days of railroads and telegraphs.

The probabilities are that if the capital were now shifted in order to meet the change in the circumstances of the country, it would have to be shifted again for the same reason in fifty or sixty years more. Besides this, nothing is more certain than that the process of shifting the capital would be found enormously profitable by a large army of very shrewd and energetic persons, and once begun, we might trust to them to keep it up. The question of a change in the capital would come up in every Presidential canvass, and would form a plank in every platform. Each State, with any pretensions to the honor of having the seat of government within its border, would have its lobby at Washington working for it, and its pledged delegates in all the conventions.

Who knows, indeed, but the capital would eventually become a portion of "the spoils," and the victorious party claim the right of fixing its site during its term of office. Should this come to pass, the propriety and expediency of occupying the White House, the Capitol and the various Departments, which, like travelling menageries, or photographic vans, and having them drawn from place to place by Government mules, would soon be apparent to everybody.

One reason for moving it from Washington, urged strongly at a recent meeting, ought not to be passed over without notice, namely: that in its present position the difficulty and expense of defending it in time of war would be very great. Considering that the population of the United States will probably number 100,000,000 by the end of the century; that they will have no enemies on this side of the Atlantic Ocean, and will be able to put on foot the largest army and navy in the world, the propriety of stowing away the capital in the interior to save it from invaders is not apparent at first sight. If we have to do this with Washington, we ought to do it with New-York and Boston and Philadelphia, and, indeed, leave a barren strip along the coast, so as to embarrass the enemy, and leave him nothing to plunder when he lands, as the Mediavals did when the Danes were ravaging their territory. There is nothing like taking precautions in time, particularly when one is weak and timid. But it seems to us if the American people cannot defend its capital on the Atlantic coast, it will hardly defend it anywhere, and the ruthless spoiler will pursue our Government even to St. Louis, and send Congressmen in chains down the river to New-Orleans.

The Brooklyn Democracy.

The Democracy of Kings County are playing a desperate and shameless game. They chose their own partisans for election officers last Tuesday, and manipulated the ballot boxes with a characteristic indifference to the rights of Republicans and the decencies of a political contest. By downright fraud they "counted out" GOODRICH and ASPINWALL, who had been elected to the Assembly, and MCLEER, of whose election as Street Commissioner there was no reasonable doubt. The canvassers were Democratic; there was no check upon their counting; and they were free to manufacture majorities to suit their convenience. The fact is a strange commentary upon the forms of an election and the rights of the electors, as understood in Brooklyn. It shows with what effrontery the Democracy there carried out their purposes, and how worthless is the recorded general result of Tuesday's contest as an expression of honest public opinion in Kings County.

But the game as thus far played has been unsuccessful in one particular. ANTHONY WALTER has been elected Sheriff by a large majority. There is no doubt of that fact. Notwithstanding all their figuring, the Democratic officials have been compelled to concede him a majority of 1,300. The most ingenious counting in behalf of CUNNINGHAM, the candidate of the Ring, failed to make him the winner. WALTER is lawfully the Sheriff elect. The Ring, however, is not prepared to give up the case, and its friends openly boast that CUNNINGHAM will yet be the man.

Now there is only one way in which this purpose of the Democratic managers can be accomplished. Three districts, indeed, remain in which the ballots are to be canvassed; and with Ring canvassers little difficulty will be experienced in reducing WALTER's majority. But by no conceivable manipulation can CUNNINGHAM gain more than 500 in the three districts in question; so that WALTER will still have a majority of several hundreds. This can be overcome by but one course. The returns for all other districts are now in the hands of the County Clerk, duly sealed, and purporting to have been duly counted. It is not pretended that error has been committed,—or rather no such pretence was heard until the necessity for some extraordinary step to secure CUNNINGHAM's election became apparent. If, then, WALTER's majority is to be set aside, these returns—already declared perfect—must be reopened by the agents of the Ring and reconstructed to meet the emergency. With the figures thus at their command, and with unrestrained control of the returns, they will have no difficulty in bringing out any result which partisan necessities may seem to require. The Sheriff must be the creature of the Ring: this, at least, is decreed, and with the help of fraud and perjury, the rest will be comparatively easy.

The programme may, to the uninitiated, appear too criminal and scandalous to be possible. It renders an election in Kings County worse than a farce, and is suggestive of contingencies in which the alternative may be despotism or anarchy. But it harmonizes with what the Democracy have already done, and indicates the only method by which the people's preference for WALTER may be frustrated.

Contracts in Confederate Currency.

We noted the other day the remarkable decision of Chief Justice CHASE concerning the validity of contracts made in Confederate currency—whether such contracts could be enforced in the Courts of the United States, and, if so, whether the contracts were payable in Confederate Treasury notes (which are now cheap) or in United States money. The gist of the decision was, first, that such contracts can be so enforced; second, that evidence can be received to prove that a promise expressed to be for the payment of dollars could be in fact for the payment of some other than lawful dollars of the United States, and that course of this case should be settled on the basis of the actual value represented by the currency of the Confederate States, at the time and place of each separate contract.

The commercial importance of this decision is, of course, evident; but it has a political importance in view of the grounds on which it was reached, namely, the nature of the Confederate States, and the definition of what they were. What we now have to suggest is that, in future decisions of this sort, some of the other members of the Court should give us the benefit of the opinions. It is very noticeable that nearly all the late decisions in the Supreme Court involving questions of political character, have been delivered by Chief Justice CHASE, while the other Judges have contented themselves with announcing their concurrence. It is also very noticeable that in but few instances have dissenting or concurring opinions been given by the other Judges. Now, we can conceive of the Court's agreeing on the conclusion regarding any particular case, but we cannot conceive all members of it as agreeing on the train of reasoning whereby that conclusion was reached, or rather, on the precise expressions used by the Chief Justice, especially where the case involves the question of secession. We repeat, therefore, that it would be instructive to the public to hear from the other Judges, occasionally, their individual views on this class of questions.

Ocean Steam Lines.

In one respect, at least, it is mortifying to compare the New-York of 1869 with the New-York of to-day—we refer to the condition of our mercantile marine. Then, American ships and American seamen were famous the world over; our wharves were crowded with ocean packets and ocean steamers, bearing the American flag, and the transatlantic trade established by our merchants were famous for speed, comfort, convenience and general desirability.

We all know what has taken place within the last eight years. French, English, German—any and all ships but American—have wrested from us our hardly-earned ocean carrying trade. "Fifteen years ago," once wrote Admiral Foxrose, "no Frenchman was considered competent to run the engines of a steamship; and although two of three lumbering old French craft made voyages to and fro across the Atlantic, yet they met with so many mishaps, were so slow and so badly conducted, that they received few passengers and but little freight. How is it now? The moment we leased our competition with the English, the French took our places, and by their success have proved how much we yielded when our steamers gave up the contest. At this moment the French are contesting every inch of ground with the British, equaling, if not exceeding the latter in the speed of their steamers, and surpassing them in all the conveniences and comforts of sea life."

In another column we present a letter on the ocean steam navigation of Liverpool, London and New-York. Comparisons like those there set forth are indeed "odious;" but if the chagrin they cause only serves to stir up our merchants, and especially our legislators, to the need of unhampering our commercial marine, and giving it "free course" once more, they will have served a good purpose. The history of the Cunard, the Inman, the National, and the Liverpool and Great Western (or WILLIAMS & GUION) lines, between New-York and Liverpool, points its own moral for merchants and shipowners. The great modern invention of screw propulsion has revolutionized ocean transportation, and it only remains for our countrymen to look the situation fully in the face. The screw has driven the sail, and is fast driving the paddlewheel, from the ocean in the quick passenger and freight lines; the time will come when it will monopolize the field.

The duty of our own City, and the duty of Congress are clear. The time will soon be at hand when, with the India trade and the American trade from both continents growing rapidly in New-York, the City must compete more successfully for ocean steam lines—lines to carry cargo to Europe, and to bring emigrants and freight back. But we all know what the trouble is—the difficulties and expense of shipbuilding in our own yards, and the stringent Registry laws which prevent American enterprise from working in foreign-built ships. Our cotemporary declares with earnestness, as his solution of the question, "The cry that the dignity of the country will suffer if its citizens are permitted to build or purchase steamers abroad is sheer folly. The maritime dignity and power of the United States will rise with every accession of first-class ocean steamships to its mercantile marine. If all the steamers now plying between the United States and Europe could be transferred to citizens of the United States to-morrow, and henceforth sail under the flag of the United States, and under the command of citizens of the United States, the country would be a great gainer, both in profit and prestige." We may add that, in the opinion of many merchants, Congress would do well at its next session to repeal the Registry law, or to so modify it that we can buy the best Clyde-built vessels for new ocean steam lines. As it is now, our duties on articles used in shipbuilding are so high that foreign builders can furnish foreign lines with vessels at far lower prices than our builders can furnish similar ones to our own merchants.

Certain it is, at all events, that we ought now to strike for a share of the carrying trade of which we have been deprived, and that emigrant transportation will continue to enrich British shipowners until our Registry law is modified.

The World is in an ecstasy over the Democratic triumph. "It enables us," it cries, "to repeal all the odious and unjust laws" which the Republicans passed. "It secures the restoration of local self-government in our large cities"—doubtless on the Tweedian model of New-York City. "It is the knell of the Registry law, the Sunday Liquor law, and the whole catalogue of oppressive statutes," &c. In short, "down with everything" is the motto of the World. Let us begin all over again, and have local Governments based on the straightforward principles of bribery, peculation and corruption. The ancient classics used to say that the City Republics were responsible for all the mischief done by the Democrats. We hope they understand clearly by this time that they, and their principles, have been the cause of our losing one of the greatest opportunities we have had in many years.

The effect of investigations in Chancery cases has long been a subject of complaint, and with good reason. It appears that the Commission to investigation alone will entail a charge upon the Government of $20,000. The Commission of the Court of Chancery appointed to examine into the Secret Service accounts is expected to expend the same sum of money. The assigned reason for appointing such a commission is that it is necessary to do so because the Court has not time to make a thorough examination of the accounts itself. Most of the work, in these cases, is done by a single officer of the Court, assisted by a clerk or two. Nearly one-half of the money thus expended would be saved if the Court could do the examining itself, and remain home attending to business of which it is very greatly in need. Nearly one-half of the money thus expended would accrue from the expenditures of over $10,000 in Louisiana.

The address from Father HYACINTHE, which is intended to introduce a volume of his sermons to the American public, will stir many hearts by the warmth and devotedness of its aspirations. There is a tone of deep sorrow in the passages bearing upon the Father's difference with his ecclesiastical superiors, while this sentiment does not restrain him from once more repeating his "protest against the excesses which dishonor it (the Roman Church) and cause tears upon its ruin." The rage enthusiasm which first gave this great priest his influence wrec even the most careless and indifferent, whose death its chief whole passage in which he prodigalizes the ultimate union of the Roman Church and the Churches of the Reformation—a combination "which shall be the Church of the past in its original purity and beauty; but shall have besides the depth of its analysis, the breadth of its synthesis, the experience of its trials, its struggles and its griefs through all these centuries." The fire which burned in the hearts of the most memorable reformers of history animates Father HYACINTHE, and will yet compel him to do a work which will live after him.

The value of the numerous associations of visionaries which are started in the present age is very well illustrated in the proceedings of a "Social Reform" Society, held in this City. One of the speakers complained of the entire political system of the country. "He would have a new Constitution for the United States. The present one was a mistake." So far all is clear; now for the speaker's suggestions: "He was unable to give any definite idea of what should take its place." Exactly; it is so much easier to pull down than to build up. People who are dissatisfied with the present form of government show themselves somewhat at a loss when they attempt to devise a better.

Mr. PEABODY, as the cable informs us, died at "his residence in Eaton-square." It was one of the peculiarities of Mr. PEABODY that he never would have a house of his own. He cared little for himself in all things—it was his habit, for instance, to dine off a mutton chop at the grand dinners he used to give, where every luxury was spread upon the table. He had a room in the house of his old friend, Sir CURTIS M. LAMPSON, in Eaton-square, and it was there that he died. He used to live there in the most quiet and retired manner, and his name did not appear in any directory or "Court Guide." He has suffered much during the last four years, and could very seldom be induced to call in a doctor; when he did he neither obeyed the doctor's orders nor took his medicine. As one of his physicians complained a short time ago, Mr. PEABODY was a "most unsatisfactory" patient. He hated to be asked after his health, or to have any fuss made over him. He will, no doubt, be buried in Danvers, Mass.—that, at least, was the wish he often expressed in his lifetime. We may add that the statue of Mr. PEABODY, recently set up in the Royal Exchange, London, has given satisfaction to everybody, except the Saturday Review. The attack of that journal upon it was lately reprinted in these columns. The sculptor is an American—quite sufficient to account for the sneers of the Saturday.

When Saints quarrel the unregenerated may be excused for letting their angry passions rise. The community at Utah are behaving no better than the wicked. Schisms of portentous dimensions have appeared, and the elders have been moved to testify their devotion to liberty by suppressing a newspaper. Mr. COLFAX's speech was like a stone thrown into a pond—the ripples extend to every part. He set some people thinking, and Mormonism will not bear thinking about. Lately one Saint fell upon another with cruel blows and much profane language. Internal divisions already threaten to do more to uproot the polygamists than outward opposition.

Undeniably the land question makes progress in England. Here is the least generous of all the English papers admitting that the leases generally accorded to Irish tenants are oppressive in their character, and cause the soil to be wasted, while condemning the poorer inhabitants to "a wretched, uncertain, profitless life." Six months ago the journal in question would have bitterly denounced any one who had dared to make this statement. Professor FAWCETT (the blind member of Parliament) has promised his constituents that a land bill for England shall be introduced as soon as the Irish measure is safely carried. Nothing can prevent this. "Let us," says Mr. FAWCETT, "abolish the present law of primogeniture; let us remove the present restrictions on the power of selling land." Public opinion in England is ripening for these reforms. In all probability the present Prime Minister will remain long enough in office to carry them all through.

The Café California, of Paris, has, for some years, dispensed to the poor of that city good cooked meat at two cents per plate, and of an inferior quality as low as one cent. An enterprising importer of Australian preserved beef is about to repeat the experiment in London. He promises to furnish a meat dinner, "well cooked savory and nutritious," with the addition of potatoes, at the same very moderate figure. Any one luxuriously inclined may preface this repast by a plate of soup with bread, which is also to be furnished for two cents. If, with such advantages, London cannot preserve her laboring poor from misery and want, there must be something materially wrong in the entire structure of society, as well as in the general distribution of wealth.

The Chamber of Commerce report on the frauds and corruptions in the management of our State Canals, only reiterates an old story, but it is one that must not be forgotten. The indifference of the Canal Board and the Legislature has long been well understood. The contract system is wasteful to the last degree, and utterly fails to increase the canal-carrying revenue, and losses are entailed every year upon the grain trade by delays. But this just suits the railway monopolists. It is their interest to have the canals unserviceable, and so far their influence seems paramount. Nor, in spite of whatever the Chamber of Commerce may say or do, is there much apparent chance of a reform. Still, it is something to present against the parties concerned a report of misdoings.

The delegation of the Friends appointed to visit the Indian tribes, have offered some valuable suggestions for the future government of the Redskins, and others which seem a little doubtful. They would have all engagements made with Indians faithfully carried out—a course which alone would have prevented many of their wars. They would have the Indians be taught to read, and have reservations reserved for them, in their own country, where they may be taught to cultivate the ground, and become civilized. They would have "more light, air and cleanliness in Indian lodges, and teach the young to sweep floors, and discourage vermin and thoroughly cleansing them." Is not this trying at the mouth? If an Indian prefers a lodge of his own making to the model one which the Friends would build, no one can force him to alter his tastes. The Government has already enough on its hands without undertaking to carry out sudden conversions in civilization. But the suggestions of the Friends are well and kindly meant, and deserve to be considered with respect.

Rumors are again current regarding the possibility of a general European disarmament. This time it is the Emperor NAPOLEON who is reported as having taken the initiative in so desirable a movement. The finances of the Great Powers have for some time been seriously affected by their enormous war expenditure. The expense of an armed peace may be inferred from the fact that the present annual expenditure on European military establishments amounts to $600,000,000 in gold. The annual interest payable on their war debts amounts to $300,000,000 more. Exclusive of reserves, the number of men maintained on a war footing is 2,800,000, and the loss entailed by the withdrawal of such a force from productive labor has been estimated at $1,000,000 per day. Wealth is understood to be the main obstacle to a general reduction of warlike establishments; but as the thrifty Germans are beginning to look somewhat askance at the proportions of the debt, amounting to $300,000,000 in gold, incurred by the head of the Confederation, it is scarcely likely that King WILLIAM and his advisers would interpose any very formidable obstacles in the way of such a step.

What is a colt? People generally suppose that it is a young horse—under two years, certainly. He is first a colt, then a "yearling," then a two-year-old, and so on. But at Pavilion Course on Thursday, Mr. BONSMA's Jo. Elliott was tried for a mile, and his performance is described in all the journals as being "wonderful for a colt." We look for his age, and find that he is five years old. The question is, when will this colt be a horse?

Collisions at Sea—Legislation Required.

The dangers arising from collisions at sea have very largely increased both in number and in the damages which they cause, in these later years. The English Wreck Register for 1868 gave the number of collisions in the seven previous years as 2,344, which is nearly one for every day in the year. Twenty-five years ago it would have been almost an impossibility for any collision to have caused damages equal to that caused by the sinking of the steamer Scotland and the ship Kate Darner off Fire Island. The loss by that collision alone was probably $750,000. We think it is a low estimate to say that the value of property lost in the collisions which have come before our Admiralty Courts in the port of New-York within the past year, is over a million and a half of dollars.

It is natural that this increasing peril and loss should have called for much consideration from those who go down to the sea in ships; and in 1863 the English authorities, after much consultation on the part of the Board of Trade, the Lords of the Admiralty and the Trinity Brethren, with the aid of the best professional assistance that could be procured, promulgated a set of sailing rules, for the purpose of avoiding collisions at sea. Those rules were afterward passed in the form of a statute by Congress and adopted by almost every maritime nation, and they have therefore become, as was held in the case of the Scotia, the Law of the Sea.

Those rules, thus having been made law, became immediately the subject of construction by the Courts. The Admiralty Judges have to apply them in every case of collision at sea which comes before them. Sitting without a jury to aid them, they have not only to find out the facts which actually occurred, from testimony which is proverbial as being more contradictory than in any other class of cases; they have to familiarize themselves with the nomenclature of the sea, and the laws of correct navigation, and they have to apply to the facts of the different cases, as ever varying as the waves which bear the vessels, these rules which were prepared so as, if possible, to meet all cases. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that the rules and the decisions of Courts of Admiralty on them have been the subject of much discussion. This has been especially so in England.

We have before us a copy of "Correspondence concerning the Rule of the Road at Sea, &c." which arose out of suggestions made to the British Board of Trade and to the Admiralty from various quarters, that some alterations were needed in the rules to make them clear, especially in the eleventh and thirteenth articles of the regulations, which provide as to what should be done when ships are meeting "end on, or nearly end on." The writers declared that a misapprehension seemed to prevail among seamen in reference to the rules, so that their observance tended largely to cause collisions; that seamen appeared to understand that whenever they saw a light ahead, or nearly so, they were required by law to port their helm, whereby they often ran into vessels which were crossing their track, and which they could have escaped by a different maneuvre; and it was stated that this error on the part of seamen was caused by the action of the Admiralty Courts, which had apparently given that construction to the rules. Hence arose, on the one hand, these suggestions that the rules ought to be altered, and there are published three different forms of rules, which were suggested to the Board of Trade as improvements upon the rules as they then stood. That Board, on the other hand, took up the cudgels in defence of the rules as they were, showed that they were drawn up with much consideration, that they had been adopted as they were by the maritime nations of the world and ought not to be lightly altered, at least without some consultation with the chief maritime Powers, and they claimed that the difficulty, if there was one, was not in the rules, which were clear enough in themselves, but in the fact that they were not obeyed. The Secretary of the Board, Mr. GRAY, prepared a little pamphlet called "Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea," which seems to us well calculated to put clearly into the minds of seamen what the law required of them to do in regard to other vessels. Besides his pamphlet, he prepared "The Rule of the Road, being Aids to Memory, in four Verses," which was also reported to Parliament.

The Board of Trade went further than the pamphlet and the poetry, which, indeed, they did not officially indorse. They prepared a catechism for mariners on the rules, in which they were to be examined if they would be masters or mates, which was adopted also by the French Admiralty. But their opinion that no alteration of the rules was necessary or advisable was not concurred in by the other maritime authorities of England, and after consultation with the French authorities a new article was prepared by Englaud, which, on July 15, 1868, was adopted by the Privy Council, and thus received the binding force of law in England. It has since been adopted also by Hamburg, Greece, Russia and Sweden, and substantially, though in briefer form, by France.

It has, therefore, become a question what the United States should do in the premises. We do not think that the misapprehension which seems to have led to the change in England, has ever prevailed here. It will be difficult, we think, to see in what respect our Admiralty Courts have laid down any different rule from that which is contained in the explanatory article. But it is of importance now that the maritime nations should remain agreed upon regulations which shall be the law of the sea at that time should have agreed upon them in the first place. We cannot see any material defect in the explanatory article, and we hope that when Congress comes together in December, it will be left in force, along with the rules which we have adopted.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

Italian Opera.

DONIZETTI'S well-known opera of "Linda di Chamounix" afforded an opportunity last night for the appearance of Miss KELLOGG, and her chosen character to appear in one of those original characters in which he first made his great reputation. The audience surpassed that of the opening night in brilliancy as well as numbers, and the performance was in some respects a more finished and satisfactory one. Miss KELLOGG has rarely sung or acted, to our knowledge, with better effect. Her opening aria, "Oh, Luce di Guest Anima," showed that she was in fine voice and spirits, and the magnetic influence of him who is still the "great Electric" seemed to inspire her to the utmost power of her histrionic capacity. The duet with Carlo (Herr HABELMANN) was managed with much delicacy and fire, and the sudden and earnestness of Signor RONCONI, adroitly seconded by all concerned, brought the curtain down on the first act amid spontaneous and hearty applause.

No sketch is needed for opera goers, or indeed for theatre goers, of the story that gives abiding pathos and tenderness to "Linda di Chamounix" and brings its lesson home to every feeling heart. The tale is the same as that of HOWARD PAYNE'S "Clari," and is wrought up by much the same situations and accessories. It would hardly be possible to conceive a heroine for such a drama, more graceful, more delicate or, upon occasion, more impassioned than Miss KELLOGG last evening showed herself able to be. Her youth, her person, her facile vocalization are all in her favor for such parts, and she uses her advantages with consummate ability. It is possible to conceive more tender, pathetic, imploring, trusting, absorbed in a mighty love, yet so tenacious of her native purity as to become overwhelmed with despoiled at the bare thought of her betrayal. The character was well chosen for this gifted young lady's reappearance, and we are glad to be able to record her deserved success in it. Herr HABELMANN sang the music of Carlo with care and sweetness. His action is mechanical and he lacks the quality, for which there is an English equivalent, of abandon. Nevertheless his performance was a good one, and his singing was sometimes excellent. We regretted to observe a repetition of the faults that marred Signor BETTINI'S first appearance, and which seem to be by some fatality provokingly at variance with his real powers. The obstinate tendency to sing false may be in part the consequence of indisposition, and we shall gladly hope it is so until we have other opportunities to judge. Occasionally last night he was all that could be wished for, but the uncertainty that marked "Il Conte de Luna" was too frequently observable in Il Trovatore. Mme. CELLINI was acceptable in Floriska, and Signor RAHIL deserves the same praise in Il Maroheso.

The magnificent acting of Signor RONCONI, especially in the latter parts of the opera, should receive more than the hasty attention that, writing at a late hour, we are able at present to bestow upon it. It is not often that an audience has the opportunity to enjoy so admirable an exhibition of the loftiest phase of the lyric art, and it is a pleasure to say that the public on this occasion appeared fully to appreciate the fact. "Linda" should be repeated as soon as possible. Its production is highly creditable to the artists and to Mr. MARETZEK. A great many operas are presented in a manner that is commonplace, some few in a manner that is commendable, but very few rise even at intervals to what without hyperbole may be called the sublime. Parts of the representation of "Linda" fairly ascended last night even to so exalted a plane; and we do not hesitate to put on record the opinion.

A matinée is given to-day at the Academy, when "Il Trovatore" will be sung with the successful artists, Mme. BRIGNOLI and Signor LEVRANG, in the principal parts.

Theatrical.

MATINEES TO-DAY.

Besides the matinée to be given at the Academy of Music, this day, we notice that afternoon entertainments at almost all the other City theatres may be attended. LOTTA'S first matinée entertainment is to be given at Niblo's; the two farewell performances of "The Streets of New York" are to take place at the Olympic, and so on. We observe, too, that the last day representation of "She Would and She Would Not" is to occur at the Fifth-avenue Theatre. With the very sensible intention of affording out-of-town playgoers an opportunity of witnessing this comedy, Mr. DALY will see that its interpretation ends by 4:30 o'clock.

Musical Notes.

MASON BROTHERS have disposed of their catalogue of music books to OLIVER DITSON & Co. for over $100,000. This is the largest sale of musical works ever made in this country. The Mason catalogue numbers upward of seventy books, many of them of wide popularity.

THE PACIFIC RAILWAYS.

Their Influence in Commercial, Political and Social Life—The Mormons and Indian Questions Settled by Them—The Kansas Puzzle.

It is about time for us to look over our Pacific Railway investments, and see what we have done, what remains to be done, and what lessons the experience may teach us. There was a rippling sensation in home and foreign money markets some time since in reference to Pacific Railway securities, but it has died away. The desperate ventures of the gold gamblers in Wall-street shrivelled up our private credit abroad without affecting that of the Government. Erie experiences and manipulation have made foreign investors as tender and dainty about American railroad bonds as SIDNEY SMITH was wont to be about Pennsylvania obligations. It was also feared by some of our own people that Congress had spent too much money,—that we had made a reckless bargain, and that the interests of the country had been abandoned in the eager rush for territory and subsidies and termini. There is no perceptible trace of that anxiety remaining, for Summer has done well, and it is hoped Winter will not be a disappointment. Much of our early Pacific legislation was mere guesswork—we were in the dark, and strongly governed by our imagination and geographical recollections. When people talked of the Rocky Mountains, it was almost with terror, for these mountains covered a hidden, forbidding land, as repelling as Othello's fancied journeyings. Men thought of it as of "Centre vast and desert Mile;

Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch Heaven,
And of the cannibals that each other eat,
The anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders."

These were more geographical difficulties, however, and like difficulties generally, they melted before the resolute energy of builders and engineers. Dangers sank into the mists, and the Rocky Mountains became as harmless and attractive as our modest Catskills. The trade seemed to glide along and link in happy union before we felt they were fully under way. And now that we look back we feel that it was worth as much as was spent to bind the two oceans, and achieve the inestimable political advantages which have followed. There are enterprises that deserve to rank in history with the most famous achievements of war—and overlay of a brighter hatred than Blenheim and Waterloo and Gettysburg. A bridge, or a canal, or a dyke, or a railway, or a telegraph, are in themselves commonplace and homely, but nations have more effectually reached true comfort and prosperity by their aid than by conquest. The trade that gave us these great railways has seen a happy and appropriate companion achievement in the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. With fewer, resolute men, wandering over peninsula, and Isthmus, and stream and mountain, looking for other canals to dig and other roads to build, we may hope for still greater triumphs. Already Pacific Railways have solved two painful and disappointing problems—the "Mormon question" and the "Indian question." There was an end of them when LELAND STANFORD drove his golden spike into the connecting rail on Promontory, Utah. What threatened to be an aggressive, political organization became a social amalgamation, for BRIGHAM YOUNG, with the Internal Revenue Bill in the face of his congregation, made the Mormon Church a social institution. Instead of being the leader of a crazed people, he is now the leader of a sober people, and, if he pleases, may be a Senator. Instead of being a political nuisance, he is a social and commercial factor. Instead of being a political nuisance, he is a social and commercial factor. Instead of being a political nuisance, he is a social and commercial factor

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

There was a very fair attendance at the Exchange yesterday. But few sales were made, amounting in all to $22,450. The four-story house and lot, No. 29 Pearl-avenue, sold for $22,000. The other sales were unimportant.

To-day the auctioneers and regular attendants will have an interval of rest; no sales will be attempted, and the echoes of the cheerful basement will not be disturbed.

On Tuesday next, 11th inst., Messrs. JOHNSON & MILLER have quite an extensive sale of Brooklyn property consisting of fifty valuable building lots, being part of the block bounded by East New-York and Union avenues and Furnald-street. East New-York-avenue is the principal thoroughfare leading to the grand southeastern entrance of Prospect Park. The property to be sold is located within twenty five minutes' drive of the South of Hamilton-avenue ferries, over Union-street, a very fine avenue, which is paved with Belgian pavement, and runs direct from the ferry through Prospect Park, thereby bringing the property almost at the doors of New-York City. The lots will rent for good prices, even at the present time. The grades are good and the property desirable for investment at any now in the market. Many wealthy capitalists from New-York and Hartford, Conn., have made large purchases in the vicinity.

Also, at same time and place, the balance of the property situated at Great Neck, L. I., formerly belonging to Hon. BENJAMIN WOOD, consisting of 180 desirable lots. All of the above property will be sold absolutely, regardless of price. Maps and particulars at the office of JOHNSON & MILLER, No. 25 Nassau-street, New-York.

The same day Messrs. WYCKOFF & LITTLE have a sale of ninety-five lots in the Ninth Ward, Brooklyn, on Flatbush and Fulton avenues and McDonough-street. Maps and particulars are now ready at the auctioneers' offices, Nos. 74 Cedar-street, and 181 Montague-street, Brooklyn.

The same day Messrs. E. H. LUDLOW & Co. will, by order of Wm. LAUMEER and ZACHARIAH RENDRICK, executors of JEREMIAH CARMANY deceased, sell the three-story, basement, and sub-cellar brick high-stoop house and lot, No. 210 East Nineteenth-street, south side, near Third-avenue; house, 20.6 by about 50 feet; party walls both sides; lot 20.6 by 92.9. $10,000 may remain on bond and mortgage for three or five years. Also, at the same time, by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of J. L. LEWIERS, referee, the valuable corner lots lot with building known as No. 120 Duane-street, south side, between West Broadway and Hudson-street, being 25 feet front, 48.8 rear, 125.3 in depth, and having a frontage on Hudson-street.

Other interesting sales will be made during the week, particulars of which will be given hereafter.

THE ELECTION REVIEW.

The Utica Observer claims for GEORGE SANFORD, the Democratic candidate for Senator in the Nineteenth District, a majority of eight votes. Five of these votes will last for GEORGE H. SANFORD.

Hon. CHAUNCEY J. FOLLETT, Republican, re-elected Senator in the Twenty-sixth District, run about five ahead of his ticket in Ontario County.

The Argus claims thirteen majority for WILLIAM D. MUNRO, the Democratic candidate for Member of Assembly in the First District of Albany County.

The member of Assembly in the Second District of Delaware County is now conceded to be Democratic. This is a Republican loss. GEORGE M. GALLAGHER, the candidate elected, was formerly a member of the Senate.

MATTHEW P. BERRY is believed to be in Assembly from the First District of Chautauqua County, by 575 majority over Dr. F. E. BREWER, the Independent Republican candidate. He had an majority in the own town, and carried all but three or four towns in his district.

The Albany Argus claims 25,000 majority for HELSON, and a larger majority in the balance of the Democratic State ticket. It also claims eighteen Senators, conceding the election of the Republican candidate in the Thirty-first (the Erie) District.

The majority for WILLIAM M. GRAHAM, the Democratic candidate for Senator in the Tenth District is about 800.

The Syracuse Republican says that ANSON S. WOOD, Republican, is elected to the Assembly from the First District of Wayne County.

Our list of Assemblymen elect, corrected by the late returns, gives the Democrats a majority of sixteen, there being fifty-six Republicans and seventy-two Democrats.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

Offices to be Filled—The Ring Candidates.

The State election is over, and the "Ring" have swept the board. They have elected every candidate they put in nomination, with the exception of two Assemblymen, and one of these—Mr. COSTA, of the Ninth District—they will doubtless cheat out of his place when it comes to the official count. They have done even better than last year, for at that election three candidates for the Assembly were successful who ran in opposition to the Tammany nominees. It is not strange, therefore, that the "Ring" feels stronger than ever, and that, with the aid of a Democratic Legislature to shape legislation in accordance with their wishes, they consider themselves firmly established in power for an indefinite time to come.

The next move to be made on the Tammany chess board is for the Ring to make up a "slate" for the municipal election to come off on the first Tuesday of next month. The prizes to be won at this contest are not less valuable than those at stake in the election just past. Under the new law reorganizing the Board of Aldermen, there are twenty-one of these functionaries to be elected, instead of seventeen, as heretofore, which, together with twenty-one Assistant Aldermen, make up a list of forty-two fat berths of $4,000 salary each, besides "jobs" and stealings, which, in the hands of Democrats, will amount to at least three times as much more.

Then there are nine Police Justices and nine Civil Justices to be elected, with salaries of $2,000 a year each, and six years' term of office. This makes a list of sixty offices to be filled at the December election, for each of which there will be less than a dozen aspirants in the Tammany fold, who have equal claims to the favor of the "Ring." Under these circumstances it would seem a difficult task to make up a slate that shall command the support of all the disappointed aspirants and their friends; but the "Ring" have shown themselves adept at difficult tasks, and they will, no doubt, perform this one as successfully, and with as little murmuring from the disaffected as heretofore. Implicit obedience to the decrees of SWEENY, TWEED and HAVEMEYER is now the cardinal article in the faith of St. Tammany. To rebel against them, or to question their justice or wisdom, is a mortal sin, to be followed by excommunication and eternal political damnation.

The movements and consultations of the Ring leaders during the next week will, therefore, be watched with great interest by the politicians, far surpassing that with which the faithful will look for the deliberations of the Ecumenical Council.

The following list of Ring candidates for Aldermen and Assistant Aldermen will attend the readers of the TIMES a fortnight or two before since, and, although it may not prove entirely correct, it will be found to be as near the truth as one not in the full confidence of the Ring is competent to prepare.

| Dist. | Aldermen. | Assistant Aldermen. |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | John Sessions. | James Hickey. |
| 2. | Thomas Cronan. | Patrick Lynagh. |
| 3. | Jas. Monahan. | John Bush. |
| 4. | Richard Walters. | Jas. Gannon. |
| 5. | Henry Hughes. | Isaac Robinson. |
| 6. | Arthur Miller. | Lawrence E. Hill. |
| 7. | Jas. J. Gumbleton. | Jas. C. Brakeman. |
| 8. | Edward Wren. | Jno. Matthews. |
| 9. | Peter Calkin. | Jas. J. Foley. |
| 10. | Joseph Hoffman. | Bernard Costello. |
| 11. | James McKeever. | John J. Walsh. |
| 12. | Henry Wollman. | Edward Costello. |
| 13. | Chas. Ollis. | Patrick Gibney. |
| 14. | John Reilly. | John Mooney. |
| 15. | Lawrence O'Brien. | John Murray. |
| 16. | John Nesbitt. | Nicholas Houghton. |
| 17. | Geo. W. Cregier. | Thomas Ryan. |
| 18. | R. Ormond. | Peter Bailey. |
| 19. | David S. Jackson. | John Halloran. |
| 20. | Jas. Cunningham. | Richard Gallagan. |
| 21. | Geo. H. E. Lynch. | Michael Shelley. |

POLICE AND CIVIL JUSTICES.

A good share of the present Police and Civil Justices, as of the Aldermen and Assistant Aldermen, will be renominated. The slate is not yet fully decided upon, but the following new men have the inside track for the nomination:

Aldermen MCQUADE for Police Justice in the Ninth (our district) and JOHNSON FORSTER, a member of the Assembly, for Civil Justice. JOHN SCOTT for Police Justice in the Fourth District, and ANTHONY HAZEMAN, ex-Member of the Assembly, for Civil Justice; THOMAS FERMAN for Civil Justice in LEROWITZ's district; WILLIAM H. TRACEY for Civil Justice in the Fifth District in place of LOEW, elected to the Common Pleas County; J. WALKER FOWLER for Civil Justice in DODGE's district.

These will doubtless be other changes, but the above are all that are regarded as certain at the present writing.

The Vote in the Seventh Senatorial District.

The result of the canvass in this district, the only one from which full returns did not come on the night of the election, has at length been made known, and shows an overwhelming majority for TWEED. Both GOULDING and BONET having withdrawn from the contest, BENJAMIN MILLS was placed in the field at the eleventh hour.

FOURTH SENATE DISTRICT.

| Ward. | Tweed. | Mills. |
|---|---|---|
| First | 3,276 | 207 |
| Second | 201 | 71 |
| Third | 227 | 123 |
| Fourth | 2,129 | 251 |
| Fifth | 1,298 | 252 |
| Sixth | 4,872 | 283 |
| Seventh | 4,949 | 797 |
| Thirteenth | 2,007 | 280 |
| Fourteenth | 2,676 | 616 |
| | 19,635 | 2,880 |

Majority for Tweed, 16,755.

The Vote for District-Attorney and Coroner.

The returns which come in yesterday from outlying districts complete the canvass for District-Attorney and Coroner, and show the following to be the full vote of the City:

DISTRICT-ATTORNEY.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Smith | 29,668 | Garvin | 26,[illegible] |
| Anthony | 11,819 | Tomlinson | [illegible] |

CORONER.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Nelson W. Young | 44,606 | Wm. Skinner | 26,[illegible] |

The Judiciary Vote.

Returns from all except a few election districts give the following as the voting in this City for a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas and a Judge of the Marine Court:

FOR COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Hall | 32,600 | Losw | 15,[illegible] |

MARINE COURT.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pollemus | 30,[illegible] | Gross | 15,[illegible] |

The Vote for Recorder and Surrogate.

With the exception of a few districts the full returns of the votes for Recorder and Surrogate are now in and give the following results:

FOR RECORDER.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Hackett | 72,[illegible] | Eaton | [illegible] |

FOR SURROGATE.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Hutchings | [illegible] | Dayton | [illegible] |

Seventh Congressional District.

The result of the election as regards the choice of a member of Assembly in the Second Assembly District of Westchester County, appears to be uncertain for the present, the Democrats claiming to have the correct figures and the friends of their candidate, which announced on the dawn of Red Chester by a grand demonstration on Thursday evening, on the other hand claim the Republican had succeeded that their candidate, Dr. A. C. GAGE, has been elected by a majority of six. The positive result will not be definitely at hand until about Tuesday next, when the Board of County Canvassers will meet and perform some close figuring in the matter.

THE WORKINGMEN'S UNION.

Address by Mr. Young in Regard to the Workingmen and Tammany Hall.

The Workingmen's Union assembled at No. 387 Bowery last evening, Mr. NELSON W. YOUNG presiding. The Committee appointed to act with the Arbeiter Union reported progress. The delegates from the paper stainers' organization stated that their trade was still on a "strike." They said that the "bosses" had combined against them, and that the "strike" had become a question whether labor shall be equal with capital or not. The delegates from the journeymen gilders' organization announced that their trade proposed to make a demand for an increase of wages to-day, being desirous of receiving thirty-five cents an hour, instead of thirty, the present price. If the demand is not acceded to the trade will stop work. Mr. JESSUP, Secretary of the Union, said that he had written to the Secretary of the Treasury in relation to the enforcement of the Eight-hour law among the laborers on the new Post Office building, but that he had, as yet, received no answer. He mentioned that it was asserted in the newspapers that a committee of three had been appointed at Washington to inquire into the matter, but that he had not yet been informed of their action. He also said that he had received a reply from Governor HOFFMAN, in relation to the appointment of workingmen at Randall's Island, in which the latter stated that he was unaware that he had any appointments to make in connection with the House of Refuge at Randall's Island, but that if such was the case, he would be happy to receive suggestions of names. The Corresponding Secretary was instructed to write to President GRANT in regard to work on the new Post Office building. Messrs. MURPHY, CAMPBELL and WELLS were appointed a Committee to ascertain how Governor HOFFMAN can be reached in the matter of appointments at Randall's Island. Messrs. ENNIS, FITZGERALD and LEMMON were chosen as a Committee to solicit legal assistance to aid the Union in drafting bills to be presented to the next Legislature.

Mr. NELSON W. YOUNG subsequently made an address in reference to the position which he had before the public at the recent election. He claimed that he was nominated as the workingmen's candidate for Coroner, and that he ran as such, not pledging or binding himself to any political party. He said that the editor of a certain newspaper, purporting to be the workingmen's organ, approached him previous to the election, offering to secure him the Tammany nomination for Alderman in case he abandoned the contest for Coroner. He believed that he had received 20,000 majority at the late election, but that Tammany Hall had counted him out. He concluded by protesting against the misrepresentations recently made by the alleged workingmen's organ. The meeting subsequently adjourned.

Excitement in Brooklyn on the Vote for Sheriff—Another Handsome Issued—The Friends of Cunningham Betting on the Final Result.

The excitement about the Brooklyn City Hall and Kings County Court House, yesterday, in regard to the result of the election on the vote for Sheriff evinces an amount of chagrin on the part of the calculating and dashing Democracy indicative of the fact that, but for the decisive and wise conduct of the Police, in many of the polling places on election day, there would have been no trouble to borrow on the score of disappointment when the contest was over. Not all the calculations were checkmated, but a sufficient number of small schemes were upset to merely encourage still hopeful Democrats and friends of JOHN CUNNINGHAM to bet on the result of the figures to be announced by the Board of County Canvassers. Honest electors irrespective of party, however, think that the figures as already announced are decisive in favor of the election of ANTHONY WALRES to the office of Sheriff. The Democrats claim that the majority for WALTER of 1,344 has been reduced by the correction of a mistake in the count in the Ninth District, Fifth Ward, giving CUNNINGHAM 300 more, and that the returns from the Ninth District in the Tenth Ward added 600 to CUNNINGHAM's vote, making in all about 600 votes still leaving WALRES with a majority of over 800. The Democrats next calculate largely upon the returns from the Fourth District in the Twenty-first Ward, and expect to get from that point sufficient to wipe WALRES out completely. This is their last hope.

To this end application was made to Judge GILBERT, in the Supreme Court, yesterday, to issue a writ of mandamus, ordering Captain LEICH, of the Forty-ninth Precinct, to deliver to the two Canvassers of the Fourth District, Twenty-first Ward, the ballot boxes which were abandoned by them on the evening of the election, because the police and citizens insisted upon being present at the counting of the vote. The counting of the vote in the district alluded to is not likely to add to CUNNINGHAM's prospect of success, a fact which is doubtless apparent to the managers of the Democratic machine on the day of election, hence the objection to count the ballots in presence of the Police and citizens. The mandamus was issued and, of course, the boxes are deliverable at the polling place as soon as the Canvassers are ready to count them. The Democracy still hold out stoutly proclaiming that there are not figures enough to elect WALRES.
